

DAILY PLANET

ALL THE NEWS THAT FITS

Thursday, April 5

2001

NASA employees to get in free to see Great Moonbuggy Race

NASA employees, retirees and their family members may use the "get into the Space & Rocket Center free" policy to attend the Great Moonbuggy Race Friday and Saturday. NASA employees who have not received a pass badge for the Space & Rocket Center should go to the information center in the lobby and show their NASA badge. For details, call 544-2000 or see: moonbuggy.msfc.nasa.gov

To volunteer for 'NASA Goes to the Stars,' send an e-mail to Rosa Kilpatrick by Mon.

This is National Library Week. Visit the Marshall Technical Library Thurs. Register to win Marshall history book

Shoals, Marshall Small Business Showcase Thursday

Marshall's Procurement and Small Business Office and the Muscle Shoals Chamber of Commerce are co-sponsoring a Small Business and Industry Showcase, featuring how to do business with the Marshall Center, from 8:15 a.m.-5 p.m. Thursday at the Florence Conference Center in Florence. The closing reception — from 4-5 p.m. — is open to the public.

20th anniversary of STS-1 history chat set Wednesday

Marshall retiree George Harsh will present the first of two history chats celebrating the 20th anniversary of STS-1 at 11:30 a.m. Wednesday in the Heritage Gallery in Bldg. 4203. Harsh will reminisce about his experiences.

Breast cancer awareness 'lunch and learn' 11 a.m. Wed., Bldg. 4200, room P110